1999 YEAR IN REVIEW

1999 was our best year ever in a solid decade of growth, as we achieved our goal of becoming Florida's most recognized luxury residential architects. This year we completed three Isleworth homes, a charming Romanesque Cottage on Lake Bessie designed by architect Sean Lackey and constructed by Linda Pellegrini, an Italian Renaissance home also on Lake Bessie designed by architect Jeana Burt and constructed by Peatross & Hueber, and an English Manor Home on Lake Louise designed by Tom Price and constructed by Ray Coudriet. We also completed a Lake Nona Southampton, designed by Jeana and constructed by Bill Maroon.

Sean designed a French Chateausque home now under construction at Isleworth by Akers Custom Homes, and an American Colonial under construction by Derrick Builders at Lake Nona's North Village.

While Tom was working on the design for an Old World Dutch Colonial now under construction at the Four Seasons Resort Estates on the Caribbean island of Nevis, Sean was designing the only true period Victorian at Keene's Pointe now under construction on Lake Tibet Butler by McNally Homes.

Rounding out this very productive year, Sean has just completed the design for a Shingle Style Bungalow at Lake Nona, and Tom has designed a Victorian Contemporary on Lake Toho in Osceola county, and just completed the design for an Italian Renaissance Villa on Long Boat Key. Its construction drawings are now under way by our Production Manager, Manny Hernandez.

We are very proud to have achieved national prominence from Central Florida. Our firm won the coveted Best in American Living Award for the third year from the National Association of Home Builders for the best home designs in the nation. We also won the Aurora Award for the fourth year for best one-of-a-kind homes in the Southeast. You may look into these and other completed homes on our website at www.tompricearchitects.com. We look forward to what the year 2000 will bring!
